[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] The remaining detainees were from the U.S. Marshal Service and Federal Bureau of Prisons. The facility houses adult male ICE detainees with a medium-high or high custody level. None of the ICE detainees presented with or claimed to have a disability or identified as transgender. The other populations are comprised of adult male and female detainees. [REDACTED]

The facility is a single, three-story building built in 1993. It is surrounded by two fifteen-foot chain link fences with razor ribbon on top and bottom, which is supplemented by an interior shaker fence and microwave/movement detection technology monitoring the area between the fences. The entire building is encircled by a perimeter road that is patrolled by an armed officer in a vehicle on each shift. Surveillance cameras offer visibility around the entire perimeter, down the movement corridors, and into the housing units, common areas, and recreation areas. All exterior building doors are alarmed, controlled, and under constantly monitored camera surveillance. The facility is equipped with a 326-surveillance camera network, including 47 PTZ cameras. The training department is located outside the secure perimeter.

There are thirteen individual housing units in the facility. Nine units range in size from eight to 36 two-bed cells; two units contain fourteen four-bed cells; and one unit is a 56-bed dormitory. There is one special management unit (SMU) designed with 24 one-bed cells. There were no ICE detainees in special management status during the inspection. Currently, two of the multiple housing units serve as COVID-19 quarantine/orientation units. Housing pods were observed to be clean and in good condition. Pods are monitored using direct supervision. All housing unit officers are furnished body cameras.

Each general population living area is furnished with a common dayroom. The dayroom is equipped with televisions, fixed table/chair units for detainees to eat their meals, play games, and gather for conversation. Electronic tablets and one kiosk are available in each housing unit. With the tablets, detainees can receive emails, conduct video-visits, send requests to facility staff, order commissary, and access entertainment programs. All announcements and schedules are posted on the dayroom and common area bulletin boards, as well as, the housing unit kiosk. Detainees are provided indoor and outdoor recreation. Each housing unit has one law library LexisNexis computer workstation located in a dedicated room.

Inspectors interviewed eight detainees. No additional detainees volunteered to speak to the inspectors. An exit interview was conducted with a detainee transfer. The detainee stated that the conditions of confinement were adequate. He stated that the reasons for the transfer were explained to him by ICE officials. He had no issues or concerns. Follow-up interview with the detainee confirmed that he met with the deportation officer and all of his questions were answered. Two detainees complained about medical care. One detainee stated that he needed a filling replaced. The second detainee stated that his glasses broke two months ago and they still have not been replaced. The medical SME reviewed the files and interviewed the detainees and the health care providers. Timely treatment protocols had been initiated in both cases. No detainee had called the OIG hotline. No detainee expressed issues regarding conditions of confinement. All detainees stated that ICE officers were available upon request.
